Des Moines Security Firm Announces New Global Security Solution

DES MOINES, Iowa (Dec. 1, 2010) --- The Conley Group, Inc., a Des Moines, Iowa-based security and consulting firm, today announced that it has developed a cutting edge security solution that is called Remote ViewingSM.

Remote Viewing is a comprehensive security system that combines electronic security systems with physical security response, and does so in a way that it maximizes effectiveness as well as efficiency. At its core, Remote Viewing involves highly-trained technical specialists stationed in The Conley Group's Remote Viewing Operation CenterSM (RVOC) acquiring and maintaining total domain awareness about, and influence over, what is occurring at other (remote) locations. "Rather than simply being an observer, Remote Viewing functions as an all-inclusive, interactive risk-based system wherein the senses of technical specialists in the RVOC are replicated at other locations" said Tom Conley, the firm's president and founder. Technical specialists interact virtually with both critical and routine systems at customer locations.

The Conley Group's Remote Viewing represents a significant breakthrough for the end users of security services and systems in their now being able to solve difficult security challenges and do so while saving money – and a lot of it" said Conley. "We are excited about this new solution not only because it will literally change the way in which security is done, but also because it will give us a global reach from right here in Iowa.

We are also very pleased to be collaborating with Johnson Controls, Inc. in the multi-state office that encompasses Iowa. "Johnson Controls is a world-class integrator and is uniquely positioned to meet the equipment and system demands that will ensure the Remote Viewing solution functions correctly at our customer locations," said Conley. Johnson Controls, Inc. was named the System Integrator of the Year for 2009 by Security Distributing Marketing Magazine. This prestigious award recognized Johnson Controls for offering the highest quality services to the market and for serving as the best example of a business to other security providers.

Conley sees a positive impact for his company as well as for Iowa. Not only does he expect The Conley Group, Inc. to create 30 plus high-paying jobs over the next couple of years with this new solution, but he sees a trend wherein jobs will continue to be added as this new solution grows and expands. Conley said, "In addition to job growth, there will be an additional positive economic impact to Iowa in terms of cost savings to Iowa organizations that use this new security solution as well as to other Iowa businesses whose products and services we will need to support us in providing our customers with this new global security solution."
